COURT AND PUNTI DIALECTS. PUBLISHER'S NOTIOR.

Tillis Work was commenced in November 1861, the computation of the author then being that it could be comprised in one thousand four hundred pages, and would occupy two years. Many unlooked for obstructions, chiefly of a typographical nature, materially retarded the progress of the work in the first instance, and these being overgome, the author discovered that he has underestimated the extent and the importance of the vast task he had undertaken, and that it would occupy fully double the time and space which he had at the outset computed. The publication of a work of such magnitude. and presenting so many and such varied obstacles. woldom falls to the limited remuress of one single individual, as occurs in this case. The first part of the work is now issued, partly at the requets of the author and partly to afford the Foreign Community of China an opportunity of extending that assistance to the publisher, which under the circumstances is usually so freely accorded. The Price of the book complete will be 8 and it will be published in four parts at $7.5 each. But this objection presents itself to the sale of the parts separately, should the purchaser of one or more parts not take the others, a number of incomplete, and consequently valueless, copies will be left on the publisher's hands. To remody this objection, in consideration of the circumstances already alluded to, it is hoped that those who see fit to putronise the undertaking by purchasing the first part, will not object to signing ar-

tire work in advance. Missionaries supplied at Trade Price.

(From the Saturday Review.) The administration of the affeirs of our army of drill, rendering it difficult for him to draw the has at length produced the results which those proper distinction between the exercise which he interested in observing it had foreseen . So long sulkily performs as an expiation, and that which as the old system, and the old rate of pay, pro he is expected to execute with alserity and pride cured recruits in such numbers and of such qua as an exhibition of military proficiency. It would lity as satisfied the by no means exacting public, be easy to substitute for much useless parade, for it was not likely that any War Hinlater or Com- many unmenting piece a of pedantry, and for some mander in Chief would risk his credit with no evolutions which modern weapons have rendered remomical Cabinet, or give a handle to a vigitant impossible of execution in war, exercises which, Opposition, by proposing expensive changes. But while interesting to the troops, would be of our it has come to pass that the difficulty of obtaining stant application in the field—such as the dis recruits has increased at the yery time when an positions for the excert of a convoy, the placing a usual gaps have been made in the ranks of the a line of advanced posts, the opcupation and attack army by the refusal of a great part of the limited. of a position, and the passage of obstacles in preservice men to re-engage. This embarrassing -core of an enemy. probably have been ingeningsly met reducing the army to a level with the diminished supply of recruits, occurs at a moment when the great. Powers are all engaged in putting in motion or modifying the machinery which augments their legions, and when a conviction exists that, as modern weapons and modern tactics demand increased intelligence in the soldier, the materials for the ranks must be gought in classes higher than that which formerly efforded the chief supply: No wonder that, in | side "Tendens for Army Contragrs" will these circumtances, a Recruiting Commission was he required by the Undersigned until Noon on appointed; no wonder, either, that it found the FRIDAY, 15th February, 1867, from Persons problem submitted to it very difficult of solution - willing to contract for such quantities of Commisso difficult that critics are more than enomonly surial supplies. Now it is evident that in all this we have not so much radical improvements of existing machinery as a more tightening of the old sprews.

The proposed measures might, we grant, proscarcely exceed the addition of a small percentage to our present average number of redruits. Yet the Report contemplates, not merely the supply necessary to keep the army at its present strength, but a considerable increase of that strength, for it tells us that our forces are barely sufficient for s peace establishment, and it points with alarm to the totally insufficient number of troops that could be assembled to oppose an invesion. Is it possi-ble that the Commissioners themselves can imagine they have in any adequate degree provided for the exigencies of the case? A recruit—that is to say, a young man of 18 or 20, not generally very well educated, nor very well qualified to earn Tanders for Engineer Services" will be in civil life a decent livelihood—is naturally im- received at this Office until Noon, on FRIDAY, th provident. Yet the 1st April 1867, and the 31st March. 1870. the Commissioners are everse, and we think right. Further particulars are to be obtained at the y, to giving him an increased bounty, which, as Royal Engineers' Officer, Queen's Road, duily hoy say, he would probably squander. Neverthe. (Sundays excepted) between 10 A.H. and 3 P H. less, we think that an increased sum might with advantage be placed to his credit in the regimental savings bank on his entistment, to be paid to him Sterling to the Dollar, at the end of a short term of verse, continuent on The right of rejecting the whole or any partigood conduct. The knowledge that a sum worth | cular TENDER is reserved. considering was really his, to be forfeited only by his own ac', would both attract the recenit, and be a constant surety for good behaviour. We now come to the measures by which the Commissioners propose to induce men whose first term has expired to remain in the service. These are of two kinds-increased amuluments and successive additions to daily pay; a more liberal delay. method of assessing barrack damages; an inerense in the daily ration of mest. without (we presume) an additional payment; augmented pay on re-engagement; and an increase of penson of discharge. The proposed ameliorations of discipline are, to deprive some penalties of their present aumulative effect of ferlieture of pay; to diminish as for as possible the contined duty at home and abroad; and to employ some of the ample leisure which the soldier possesses, capscially in the infantry, in teaching him an industrial trade. Such are the mount by which the Commissioners propose to render life in the army "lovely and of good report." Now these measures, so far us they go, are good. After ton or twelve years' service, a soldier fully appreciates the advantages of an increase of prerent pay and future pension; and if the hardships of the life to which he has then become habituased are to be lessened, he will of course be much more ready to bear the ills hahas than fly to others: which he knows not of. But the Commissioners leave others altogether untouched. For instance, there is the offence of drunkenness, elevated by February next, and all persons indebted to said not only when committed on duty, but at all times | delay. and seusone. Now this offence is almost altogether the offepring of barrack life, and would be of much rarer occurrence in the field, fromwant of means and temptation to commit it Remembering, then, that a great propertion of oflenders of this class are arrested when on their devious way towards their beds, and that the British non-commissioned officer, being in the fixed persuasion that drunkenness is the normal. condition of the British private, infers guilt from considered the applicates of intemperance if we delay. advocate a very considerable relaxation of its penaltics.
